Foreword

WE MUST ALWAYS HAVE OLD MEMORIES AND YOUNG HOPES.

Because in youth no ambition is too high, no ideal too lofty, young hopes are a vital possession for those desiring to prosper. But a bright foresight into the future alone cannot bring this success, nor can a sound awareness of the impending crisis of the times. For here, as with most things, a recognition of the past has an influential bearing. All the warm acquaintances and rewarding experiences should forever be remembered, for they give both contrast and meaning to our lives.

The precious moments contained within this yearbook are but a small fraction compared with the vast accumulation of cherished memories which lives within us all. May it serve then as a mere reminder, lest we place too much emphasis upon mundane things, and tend to oversee the most momentous.

Dedication

Over hundreds upon hundreds of centuries, the progress of man may be sketched. The goals, the ideals, the failures, and the defeats of billions of men are preserved for all to bear witness. The power of kings, the principles of dissenters, and the terror of despots are inscribed upon the archives of history, and we are free to anatomize all these things, and from them, establish convictions.

But there were no goals, no ideals, and no aspirations which were met with recognition where there did not exist the common bond: unity. Within that meaningful word lies the key to the future.

Today, when the need for understanding is most urgently stressed, and when all men seek earnestly for peace, we profoundly insist that Brotherhood is the last chance for us all. And to those who disagree we say, if the principles of human love are lost, then there is no hope for the future of mankind.

We dedicate this yearbook to Brotherhood because we see that it is vitally important to cast aside insignificant characteristics and natures; we must recognize the highest nature: comprehension. We must observe both objectives; we must see all the tenses: the cherished past, the confusion of the present, and the obscurity of the future. We must grasp the hands of our fellows strongly and form a bond which is virtually indestructible, for only then may the pathways of the future be lighted and, God willing, remain so.

Firm, united, let us be,
Rallying round our Liberty;
As a band of brothers joined,
Peace and safety we shall find.

Our

I would like to congratulate this class on their achieving a milestone in their educational training by graduating from South Lebanon High School. A high school diploma is a necessary requirement for success in the business world, the educational world or the professional world. I would like to extend to you individually my best wishes for success in your chosen work or profession.

The faculty of our high school has done everything possible to make your stay here both profitable and worthwhile. You will look upon your four years of high school, as you grow older, to be the finest four years of your life. We hope that as you grow older your successes in life may bring honor to our high school.

*Supervising Principal
Ray A. Kurtz*

FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD

On behalf of the Board of Education I extend heartiest congratulations and best wishes for success. We would caution you about having delusions concerning the world in which you are to have a larger participation. Accept the high cost of life with courage and self-determination.

A high school education carries with it duties and obligations as well as rights and privileges. You have lived up to these obligations for the past 12 years, and we trust you will make every effort to assume the responsibilities of citizenship in your future associations. We urge you to take active participation in community, state, and national affairs. We live in times which have been characterized in many different ways--an age of crisis, an hour of decision, a time of emergency, and an era of great progress.

You are heirs to western culture and thought, and regardless of the price, you must help preserve this culture for ourselves and our posterity.

High school has given you many good friends. Each faculty member, date, classmate, test, soccer, or basketball game, play or concert, as well as each period of confusion or bewilderment has brought you to a closer understanding of one another. Cherish these friendships, they can be the most valuable things in your life.

1962--A new year begins. What do you hold for us in your days and months? What ecstatic joys, heart-rending tragedies, world-shaking situations will be your epitaph?

To you, graduates, 1962 represents fulfillment and accomplishment. Yet, as that long awaited day approaches, almost too rapidly, you experience mixed emotions of joy, trepidation, sadness. Truly this is a major step, the beginning of a new chapter, a new way of life. There are glorious years lying ahead, wonderful new experiences. Accept their challenges.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said:

"Life is too short to waste.

Twill soon be dark;

Up! Mind thine own aim, and

God speed the mark!"

And the great teacher said, "Whatsoever they hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

Freshmen

'65

The freshman class began their first year of high school by electing class officers. Their activities were limited, but they are looking forward to active future years at South Lebanon. The close of the year found them electing class officers for the coming year, choosing class colors, and purchasing emblems and pennants.

Eighth Grade

The eighth grade became well-informed as to the general routine of the school. The important decision now facing them is what course they will pursue in their high school year.

Active in school functions, the class of 1966 attended the Student Council Halloween party and held a self-sponsored Christmas Party.

They are eagerly looking forward to becoming freshmen and organizing as an entire class.

The advisors are Mr. Zarek, Mr. Sipe, and Mr. Mastromatteo.

The student governing body of the school has proved to be a well run organization under their president, Tom Heberling. The members ably sponsored an enjoyable Halloween party for the seventh and eighth grades of the school. For the upper classes, they sponsored the annual Sweetheart dance which was a pleasant change of pace from the regular school activities.

Naturally, these events take money and for this purpose, they held a car wash which proved to be a great success.

Also these representatives of government provided many services to the school such as, assembly devotions and the arrangement of hall proctors.

Our own members in their induction service clearly defined these qualities to the new incoming members. Aside from this regular service, this group of top students worked together to sponsor a book fair for the benefit of the research department of the library. Jointly with the school P.T.A. they also sponsored a book fair for the entire township at the annual Open House. The members gave the morning announcements as an additional service to Mr. Grander as well as to the school.

In Our Heart

Sweetheart Dance

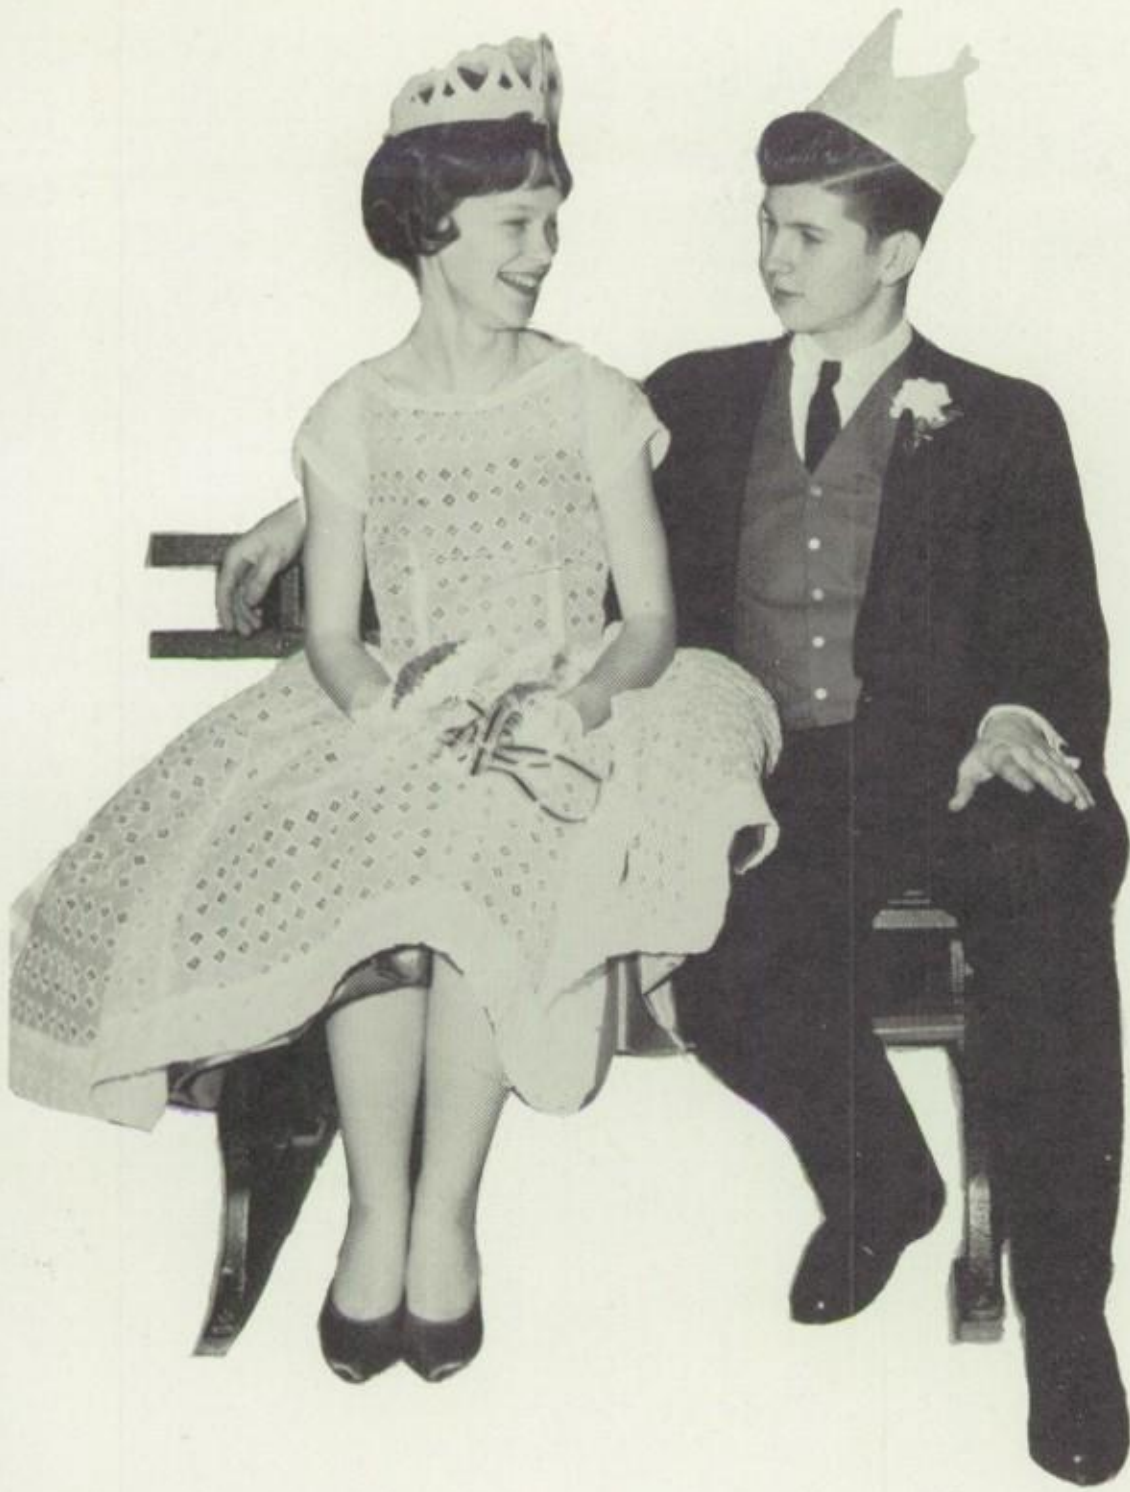

After long months of planning and preparation, the Student Council displayed its final results. As in years past, the members of the Student Council attempted to outdo themselves in the provision of an acceptable place for that mischievous little character with bow and arrow, commonly known as Cupid, to work his handicraft. The theme this year was "Cupid's Paradise."

The event was chaperoned by Mr. & Mrs. Maud, Mr. & Mrs. Krumbine, and Mr. & Mrs. Saufley.

The representatives of the freshman class were Karen Kindt and Mike Mease. The two representatives of the sophomore class were Janet Clagget and George Hoadley. The junior class was represented by Franics Batz and Bob Garret.

Finally, the great moment of anticipation arrived. First on the scene, were the third runners-up, Judy White and Jim Brown. They were followed by the second runners-up, Marie Hummel and Jeff Kreider. Sue Swanger and Tom Heberling followed as first runners-up. Last but certainly not the least were the King and Queen, Carole Swanger and Ed Checket, led by the crownbearers, Lisa Matthews and Todd Simmons, to their throne to begin their reign as King and Queen of Sweethearts.

Following the crowning, the King and Queen and their royal court danced the first dance of the evening. Everyone was then invited to join in dancing to the melodious strains of the music of the Esquires. A wonderful evening was had by all.

Senior Class Presents

The play cast, advisor, stage crew, prompters, and make-up committee.

Senior Class

To create a riotous situation, thoroughly involve the audience, and present a well-conducted play, were the aims of the senior class thespians. All those who witnessed the rollicking play, "Hilarity House," which was presented March 2 & 3, could not help but remark that it was exceptionally fine in every facet. Those same people had to admit that the house was filled with hilarity. The play, set in the present time, convincingly displayed the conflicts occurring between youth and their elders.

Under the direction of Ray T. Krumbine, the seniors became familiar with their respective parts. Everything joined to make a pleasing event for all. The audience simply could not help being receptive.

Jr.-Sr. Prom

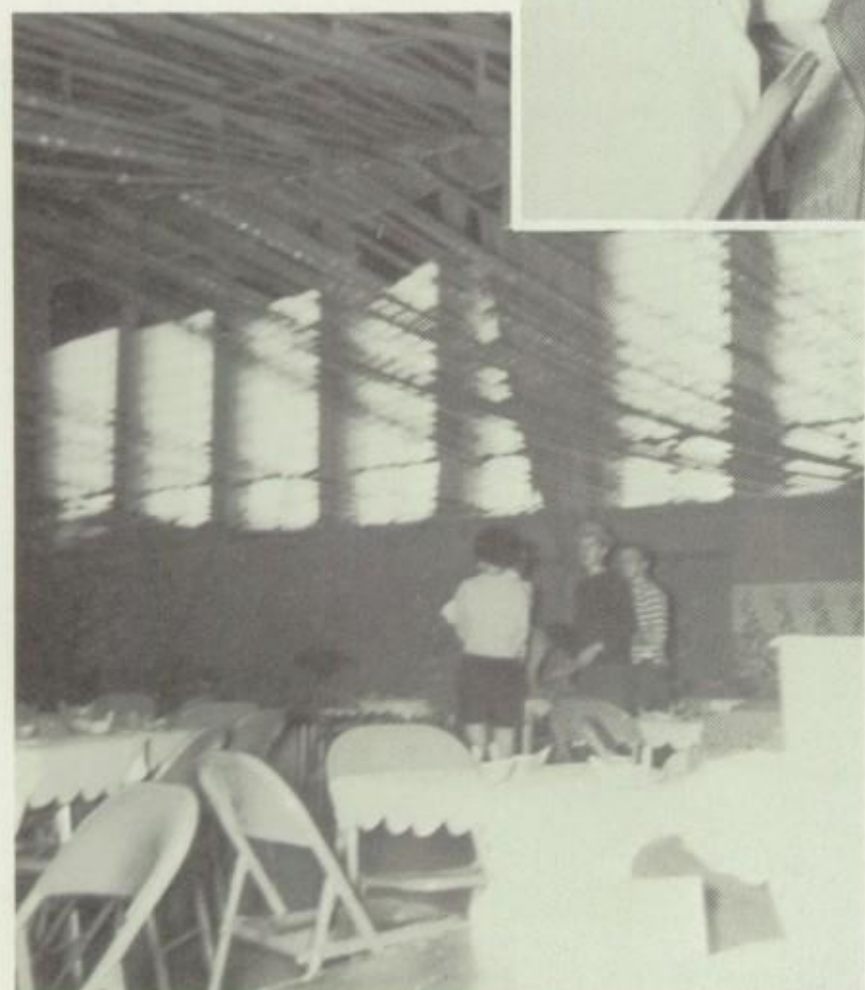

Venetian Holiday was a land of enchantment for the Juniors and Seniors and their guests. "Buddy Karl and the Karltons" supplied the music for the delightful trip to Venice, Italy.

The welcome was given by Judy Baney, Junior Class President, and was accepted by the Senior Class President, Thomas Pedia.

The cafe scene as well as the park bench served as excellent places for the tourists to take snapshots. Many couples could be seen waiting to have their pictures taken before the evening ended.

All of those attending enjoyed themselves immensely and were sorry when the clock neared the magic hour of eleven and the last dance was danced.

In the preparation of this yearbook, we, the members of the Ionial Staff, have sought to include cherished moments by means of words and pictures. Whether or not we have been successful in doing so, remains to be seen years from now, when we shall search these pages for things long since forgotten. We sincerely hope that we have included all those things which we always want to remember. It was our difficult task to make all this possible; a great deal of thought and time has been spent on it. Our yearbook will now remain in our hearts for all the years which are to follow.

Conclusion

As the footsteps at last away are fading,
As outside the bright new worlds begin,
We see the memories strive to add their shading
To the wondrous futures which we shall attain.

And when the shadows long since have passed
And nimble fingers cease to create their art
May each and every one still hold the past,
If not within the mind, then in the heart.
